At the beginning of a new volume, we have dropped our old motto-" My Country : Right or Wrong : My Country,"-and adopted a memorable expression of the representative man of the South, the Patriot and Statesman of the third quarter of the Ninetcenth

On the occasion of the release on bail of Ex-President Davis at Richmond in June last, the reader will remember that a gentleman from the North approached the great Mississippian in the Court room, and congratulating him on his release from prison, said " I am a Northern man of Southern principles." In that peculiar tone of voice that inspired his own Mississippians at Buena Vista, and which afterwards held Senators spellbound, JEFFERSON DAVIS replied, I AM A SOUTHERN MAN, OF SOUTHERN PRIN-CIPLES.

In entering upon the forty-fourth year of its existence, the Southerner re-cchoes the immortal sentiment, with a determination never to lose sight of or swerve from those principles which were made imperishable and undying by the conduct of the proud but fallen chief of the short lived but glorious SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY.
